THIRTY-THIRD SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME
November 15th, 2026

St. Paul believed that the second coming of Christ was imminent. Hence, he urges the Thessalonians to be watchful. However, St. Matthew has accepted that the parousia would be delayed. Even so, he too spoke about the necessity of being watchful. In the parable of the talents, he spells out what this watchfulness consists of; it consists of carrying out the Lord's instructions to the best of one's God-given ability. The First Reading sets before us the example of a woman who uses her talents to live an industrious and virtuous life.

History of the Catholic Church (#134) – Another project he undertook at this time – the translation of the thirty-seven of Origen's homilies – points to an intellectual interest that was to profoundly influence his intellectual and spiritual development. Jerome was fascinated with Origen's writings for obvious reasons. As a biblical scholar, daring speculative theologian, and prolific polymath, Origen (d. 254) was the greatest mind produced by the Church before Constantine. Jerome's enthusiasm for Origen at first knew no bounds and he often borrowed freely from the master's writings. Later, when a strong anti-Origen movement surfaced in the Church, Jerome did a switch and played down his immense debt to the Alexandrian genius.
